

Do What Your Heart Wants
By Andrew Ramsey
March 2015

Have you ever had to make a choice? Foxy had been thinking for a long time and every time he looked out the window he felt blind. Foxy's mom asked him how do you feel about buying the used gold microphone. "Good" he said.

He wanted to see how much money he had but it was all gone. So he grabbed his State piggy bank off his tall table in the corner of the big bedroom. Once he counted his money, He had enough money to buy one.

He grabbed his lucky golden coin. Heads the new microphone tails the used gold microphone. He flipped it and it was tails. Foxy grabbed his money and got on his green bike and went to the Five Below. He jumped off my bike and looked for the used gold microphone.

Two weeks ago he got a microphone and this is how it went. Foxy was walking in circles and thinking of two different microphone options in his head. His head was looking down and his brown eyes thinking so hard of what microphone to buy. He was sad you could just see his blinding white teeth because he thought he had enough money to buy both.

When he found it he looked for the cashier he gave him four dollars and ninety nine cents. He grabbed it and rode home. When he got home he ran to his bedroom to test it out it was like brand new he was so happy.

I hope when you have to solve a problem do what you think is best.

